Making Yourself a Good Candidate

- What makes a good candidate?
 - Do you show promise of being a good investment? I.e., does your application indicate that you are a person who has what it takes to make it through to your masters or PhD? What is the relative importance of GPA, GRE scores, research experience, extracurricular activities?
- Application packet:
 - Online application with basic information: on time & complete
 - Transcripts
 - GPA
 - Resume
 - Graduate Record Examination Score (GREs)
 - Letters of Recommendations
 - Cover letter
 - Statement of Purpose or Research Statement

Application Packet

- Graduate Record Examination (GRE) Score has three test sections – Analytical Writing, Verbal Reasoning and Quantitative Reasoning (General).
 1. What is required for your schools of interest? Do they require GREs?
 2. Know what your weaknesses are & address them months before taking the exam.
 3. Timing: Take the General GRE 2-3 months, and the Subject GRE 1-2 months before your application(s) are due.
 4. Do practice exams, each test cost money. Practice the writing!

Application Packet

- Letters of Recommendations

1. Who should you ask?
 - a) Professors, employers, RESEARCH MENTORS
2. When should you ask?
 - a) 2-3 months before the application is due
3. What do you need to supply your recommender with?
 - a) Resume
4. When do the letters need to be sent and who should send them?
 - a) Online portals are typical with a link sent to the recommender
5. What is the review committee looking for?
 - a) Details about you as a reliable student.

Application Packet

- Cover letter

1. Typically addressed to the chairperson of the department or the admissions committee.
2. Opportunity to point out your major strengths.
3. First, say something of substance: introduce yourself and where you found their program (website, friend, family, etc.)
4. Second, highlight several strengths that you want the committee to be aware of
5. Third, thank them for their time and consideration.

Application Packet

- Statement of Purpose – could be a personal statement and a professional statement
 1. A brief description of who you are as a person.
 2. A brief description of who you are as a scholar, with a link between you as a scholar and your application to their program.
 3. A paragraph or two about how you can fit in, learn from, and contribute to their program.
 4. A view of the career you see yourself after your graduate degree. Show them your vision.

What Are They Looking For?

- Maturity
 - Capable student
 - A good match with their faculty's interest and research.
1. Do your homework on the institution
 2. Does your interest fit with the faculty? (Tailor your cover letter and statement.)
 3. Study their catalog of course work, what excites you?
 4. Make each statement specific to the institution and program.
 5. Follow up to ensure your materials have been received!

Searching for Schools

General

- Don't put all your eggs in one basket – apply to a range of schools.
- Do they offer funding opportunities? Teaching/Research Assistantships (required?)
- Lab/office space?
- Pre-requisite courses?
- What is the cost of living?
- What is student life like?
- What is the climate like?
- Transportation: local & back home?

Who is active in the areas of research that interest you?

What is their specialty in this area, and what is its future?

What are their qualifications in this area?

What are the core classes that the department requires of all students? Who teaches them, what is their reputation with the present students?

What are the PhD qualifying and/or comprehensive exam structures?

What electives are offered in the area of research of interest to you?

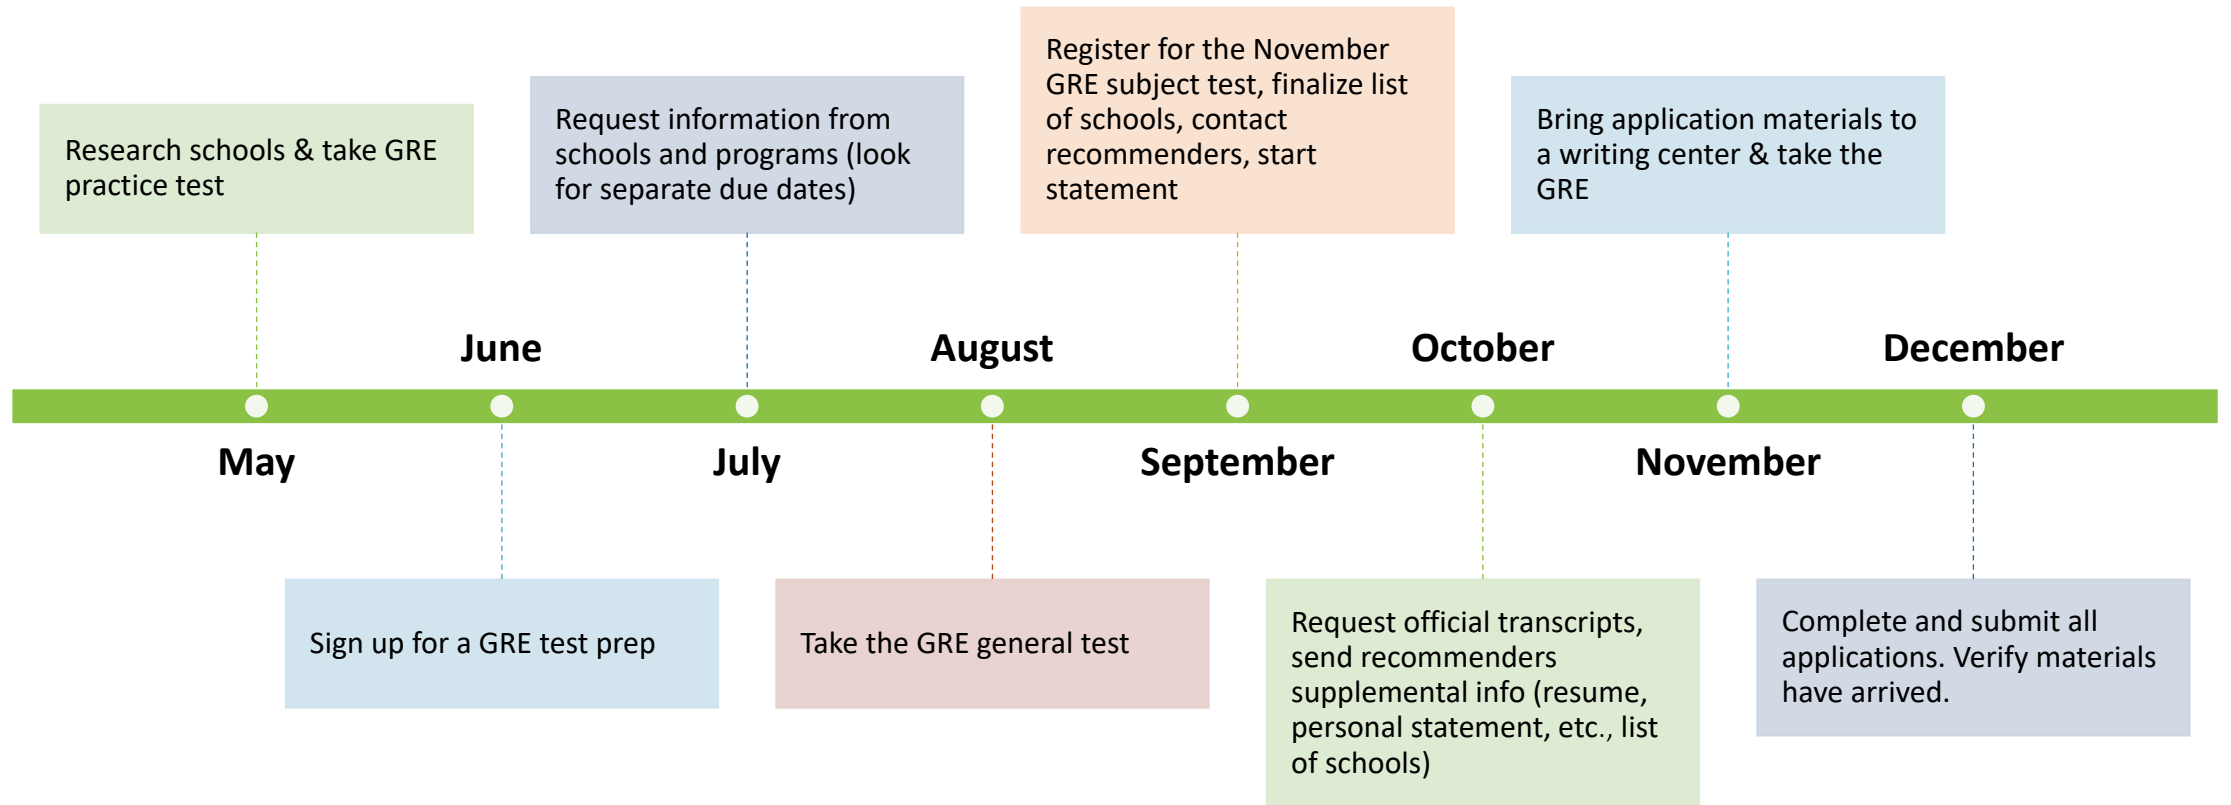

What do the present students think of the atmosphere in the department?

Is the grad student support sufficient (academic year only, year-round)?

Interview

GRADUATE SCHOOLS INVEST A LOT
TIME, ENERGY, AND MONEY IN A STUDENT.

THEY ARE ENSURING QUALITY
GRADUATE STUDENTS = REPRESENTATION OF THE PROGRAM'S REPUTATION.

THEY MAY WANT TO ASSESS
STUDENTS PRIOR TO ACCEPTANCE
FOR SUITABILITY AND FUNDING
ALLOCATION.

REVIEW THE INTERVIEWING
MATERIALS FROM PREVIOUS
